The abstract must be provided in the English language and divided into the following sections:

- Title abstract (in bold and capital letters), authors and position authors, hospital and department
- Background
- Methods
- Results
- Conclusion

- Background:
Background to the research, reasons for researching the subject. Explanation of which theories and previous knowledge underlie the research. Making new connections, discussions and contrasts. Hypothesis and problem and objective of the research.
- Methods:
Explain exactly how the research was conducted. The scientist thus describes the precise steps of the research. This includes information about test subjects, which equipment was used, where the study was conducted and what the study looked like.
- Results:
The results are described. This is purely for statistical analysis. The author explains which statistical method he used and what the results were.
- Conclusion:
It is therefore about interpreting the data and drawing conclusions. In addition, here is also the answer to the problem statement.
